

Kevin Comeau | Lawyer | Member of Transparency International Canada's Working Group on Beneficial Ownership Transparency

After graduating from Western University Law School in 1982, Kevin practised corporate securities law with Bennett Jones and Campbell, Godfrey & Lewtas (now Faskens), was seconded to the Chairman's office of the Alberta Securities Commission, and was general counsel of a US public company and then a director and general counsel of an international investment management firm.

Over the last five years, Kevin has developed policies and proposed legislative amendments to combat money laundering in Canada. He is a member of Transparency International Canada's Working Group on Beneficial Ownership Transparency; he represented Transparency International Canada at the Cullen Commission; and he has authored numerous anti-money-laundering articles published by the C.D. Howe Institute, including "Why We Fail to Catch Money Launderers 99.9% of the Time" and "BC's Public Registry to Combat Money Laundering: Broken on Arrival."
